

BROOKLYN TO BE CHANGED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—A new United States armored cruiser Brooklyn, which is at the Wallabout at the navy yard for thirty days' repairs, the announcement has just leaked out that the famous old fighting ship, which bore the brunt of the fighting at the battle of Santiago and recently brought the body of John Paul Jones from France to this country, is likely soon to be extensively altered at the expense of between $500,000 and $1,000,000. The Brooklyn is called "old," not because so many years have passed over her, but because so rapid is the advance in naval construction that a month nowadays practically counts for a year of the past. The fact is that the Brooklyn is less than ten years old. She was put in commission on December 1, 1896, and just in time to get well "shaken down" before the outbreak of the Spanish war. When completed the Brooklyn was considered the highest type of armored cruisers. She was built specially for commerce destroying and speed was the great thing sought in her construction. This was successfully accomplished, and on her trial trip the Brooklyn surpassed the contract speed.

The official speed of the Brooklyn was 21.9 knots an hour, which is the speed of the ocean greyhounds of today, although some of the latter now and then surpass that figure. The latest cruisers, like the Maryland, Colorado and Pennsylvania, do not much exceed this speed. It is in the battery emplacements, the arrangement of the armor and the weight that the latest cruisers surpass the Brooklyn more than they do in speed.

SAILORS WERE SCARCE THEN.

"The Starbuck was layin' over at Hunter's point takin' in oil for Nagasaki and most ready for sea. She wanted sixteen men and men was scarce; not, however, as I ever knowed that fact to make any difference about gettin' a crew in New York; of course, it made some difference as to what kind of a crew yer got, but you can get those fellows on Cherry and Water streets would get the number of human beings on board, sailors or no sailors."

"The old man didn't want to bother with waiting for a tide to get under the Brooklyn bridge, so we towed out through the Sound and by Block Island. We got outside about four bells in the middle watch and it was black as a pocket and blowing fresh from the northeast, with a lump of sea that wet things down in no time. Of course, we had the topsails sheeted home and the courses and topgallant sails hanging in the gear, but that was too much to show to that breeze and it had to be taken in. It was then Miller's sailors showed up for what they were worth. Not half of them knew one end of the ship from the other and the rest couldn't talk a word of English. Then the mates got busy. It was knock down and drag out for all hands except a few of us that was aloft doing what we could to take the rags off her. We could hear the fun going on deck, but didn't have any particular call to go down just then."

"The second mate was a proper 'bucko,' but for all that a good sailor man and it ain't often that the bucko mate is a real good sailor."

"We got clear of the land all right and in a few days everything had settled down for the long run around the Cape of Good Hope. Among the crew was a German who could hardly talk a word of English; though it seemed to me that he could talk almost every other language on earth. There was no doubt in the world that he had been shanghaied, and that he was a man of more than ordinary education. His name was August something and the second mate promptly christened him 'Jolly,' and I think that that hurt him as much as any of the hard licks he got for not knowing his duty. Of course, you know on a ship there are just so many men to do the work and if any man fails to do his share somebody else must do it for him, and that does not make him any friends."

WHIRLPOOL IN HARBOR.

A most interesting sight was witnessed from the Bund this afternoon. For an hour a heavy bank of clouds had been hanging over the water just outside the breakwater, and about a quarter past five a long gray spiral sank slowly down towards the water. As it approached the surface the sea became violently disturbed and a swirling cone gradually rose until there was one long swirling pillar of water and spray from the surface of the sea up to the cloud. The pillar remained for a short time and then parted, one half settling down and the other gradually rising. The lower part continued to whirl and gradually moved off, passing close to the Japanese ship lying outside. Fortunately no small craft were in the immediate neighborhood and no casualties occurred. — Japan Gazette (Yokohama).

PLANS A DESPERATE REVENGE.

"We were shifting the main upper topsail and had unbent the one that was aloft and sent the old one up on a gantline which August was tending with a turn around a pin. The second mate was on the topsail yard to make fast the midship roving, and a man at each yardarm to haul out the head earlings."

"Lower away your gantline!" sung out the second mate to August on deck, and lower away he did, letting the heavy sail go by the run for nearly twenty feet.

"Of course, he had intended to catch the second mate by the neck with the full weight of the sail, and if he had the chances are that Mr. Wilson's neck would have been broken like a pipestem as he laid over the yard. But just as August let go the second mate swung back to look down about the yard and the sail missed him. I think he knew what August was trying to do, for without a word he swung off on to the backstay and slid down to the deck, where he picked up a handspike and laid the sailor out cold. Then he began to kick the unconscious man around and letting loose some of the tallest deep-water swearing I ever heard, and I have heard a lot in my time. If the first mate hadn't stopped him he would have killed the man then and there, and as it was, it was days before the German seemed just right in his head, which had been kicked and mauled until there was not a spot on it as big as a half dollar that was not raw. For all that, not an hour was he allowed to lay up. We took him for'ard and washed the blood off him the best we could and tied some rags around his head, but he had hardly got his senses back when here comes the second mate after him again with the same handspike and chased him on deck."

WEEKLY CROP BULLETIN.

For the Week Ending October 21, 1905.

Local Office, U. S. Weather Bureau, Honolulu, T. H., October 23, 1905.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

Typical fall weather has prevailed during the past week, the days continuing warm but the nights being noticeably cooler than heretofore. The rainfall has been abundant in most sections of the group, and strong trade winds have prevailed in many localities.

Young cane still needs rain in the Kau district of Hawaii, but is in good condition in most sections and continues to make strong and rather rapid growth. A superabundance of moisture in windward Hawaii and portions of windward Maui has retarded field operations considerably, and has promoted a troublesome growth of weeds. Pineapple plants are generally in good condition, and fruit for the winter crop is developing nicely. Coffee continues to ripen rapidly, and picking is proceeding in all sections. Rice is heading and ripening; during the past week heavy rains in the Hanalei district of Kauai have caused some damage. Sisal has grown well in both central Maui and leeward Oahu; the milling season in the latter section closed on the 21st instant, the yield of fiber being of excellent quality and considerably greater in quantity than was expected earlier in the year. Windward pastures are in excellent condition, but in some leeward sections, more especially in the lower levels, rain is needed. In the north Kohala district of Hawaii, the weather has been too cold for stock. Rain is again needed in the Kula section of Maui.

REMARKS BY CORRESPONDENTS.

ISLAND OF HAWAII.

Kaunakakai—Weather continues rainy, and field operations are retarded by the excessive moisture in the ground; stripping and hoeing cane.—J. E. Gammellson.

Papaikou—Weather similar to last week, and rain still continuing; crops doing well; weeding, cultivating and fertilizing cane; building new cable landing.—John T. Molr.

Pepeekeo—Lots of rain still, and doing very wet; cane doing well; weeding, hoeing, fertilizing and stripping cane.—Jas. Webster.

Honolulu—Good growing weather continues, with showers; all crops doing well; hoeing, trashing and fertilizing cane.—W. K. Andrews.

Hakalau—Weather conditions favorable for all crops; hoeing, stripping and fertilizing cane.—John M. Ross.

Laupahoehoe—Stormy all week; heavy rains, with strong trade winds; heavy sea on 16th.—E. W. Barnard.

Pauahou—Considerable heavy rain at night during latter part of week; noticeably lowering temperatures; young cane has shown a remarkably strong growth up to the present time.—H. Glass.

Honokaa—Heavy rain during night of 16th, and strong trade winds since; plowing, hoeing, cultivating, stripping and harvesting cane.—C. H. Bragg.

Niihau—First part of week warm and calm, but latter part very stormy with strong trade winds and temperatures much lower than for some time past.—F. C. Paetow.

Kohala—Favorable cane growing conditions continue; hoeing and cultivating the principal operations during week.—W. O. Taylor.

Kohala Mission—Strong winds; rain well distributed; crops doing well.—Dr. B. D. Bond.

Puakoa Ranch—Dry weather early part of week, but followed by good rains later; very high wind on 18th and 19th.—A. Mason.

Puuhoe—Weather foggy and cold, with high winds; pastures good, but weather too cold for stock.—S. P. Woods.

Kamuela—Dry weather, with strong trade winds; a good heavy rain would be appreciated.—E. E. Conant.

Kamuela—Fine weather during fore part of week, followed by light rains and a northeast gale.—Mrs. E. W. Hay.

Honokahau—Weather during the past week has been cloudy, with occasional light showers; lowland pastures quite dry and much in need of moisture; stock doing fairly well.—P. R. Greenwell.

Kealahou—Partly cloudy and showery weather, with cool nights.—Rev. S. H. Davis.

Kealahou—Fine weather continues; showers on 14th, 15th and 16th.—Robt. Wallace.

Naalehu—A few small showers since last report, amounting in all to 1.28 inches; more rain needed; still harvesting cane.—G. G. Kinney.

Pahala—Light showers during the week, but not nearly enough rain for the requirements of young cane.—H. D. Harrison.

Kapoho—Conditions favorable for growth of cane—warm days and hard rains at night; stormy weather permits no fishing.—H. J. Lyman.

Olaa—Cloudy days, and heavy rains at night; plant cane coming up well; rations making a good showing.—E. P. McCann.

ISLAND OF MAUI.

Kipahulu—Fine weather, for all crops, but too wet for weeding; weeding and hoeing 1907 crop.—Andrew Gross.

Hana—Fine growing weather continues, with light showers and trade winds; cultivating and weeding cane.—N. Ormsted.

Nahiku—Strong winds throughout week, and continued rainy weather; vegetation of all kinds doing well.—C. O. Jacobs.

Huelo—Less rain during the past week than for some time previous, in consequence of which the condition of all stock is much improved; growth of grass, weeds and light vegetation very rapid in the warm, sunny weather.—W. F. Pogue.

Peahi—Weather very stormy, with lots of wind.—Geo. Groves.

Haiku—Warm, sunny days with gentle night rains have been very favorable for field work and for pineapple growth; sisal also doing well; plantation irrigation ditches running full; pastures and grazing stock in good condition.—D. D. Baldwin.

Pala—Good growing weather has prevailed, and there has been enough rain to limit artificial irrigation to some extent; usual field operations in progress.

It has been necessary to do a great deal of weeding, owing to the frequency of rain.—J. J. Jones.

Makawao—Fine days and cool nights during most of week; last two days rather showery, with strong trades; conditions favorable for growth of all vegetation; Kula section needs rain again; some of the late crops are doing well, especially peanuts.—E. H. Bailey.

Puunene—Very sultry weather during first two days of week, but high winds have prevailed during latter part; weather very dry on lower lands, and all pumps running.—J. N. S. Williams.

Wailuku—Clear, dry weather; gardens doing well; rice planting; young cane making good growth; streams falling, but sufficient water for irrigation; high winds during latter part of week, but no damage so far.—Bro. Frank.

Kihel—Weather has been very dry and warm during week; light southerly winds with occasional gusts.—Wm. A. Sparks.

Kaanapali—Light variable winds and warm weather during fore part of week; partly cloudy weather and strong northeast winds during the latter part, with light rain at intervals; more rain on higher levels; vegetation fresh and green.—Wm. Robb.

Maunawili—Weather cooler with showers, mostly at night; coffee ripening up nicely; planting coffee.—John Herd.

Waimanalo—Days cooler during latter part of week; occasional light showers.—A. Irvine.

Paloalo Valley—Considerable rain during week, mostly at night; rice is heading up, and some fields are turning yellow; large number of patches being planted with young taro; vegetables growing freely; rubber trees have recovered completely from the effects of transplanting, and are doing nicely.—F. L. Webster.

Sisal—Weather warm during day, but cool and pleasant at night; several showers during week, and 50 inch of rain on the 15th; sisal looking well; milling season closed on 21st.—Wm. Weinrich, Jr.

Ewa—There have been strong northeasterly winds on several days of the week; cane crops in good condition.—W. Lohrengel.

Kahuku—Weather continues warm; high trades have prevailed this week; heavy shower on 14th; all crops, pastures and livestock in excellent condition.—R. T. Christophersen.

ISLAND OF KAUAI.

Elele—Weather warm during the day, but showery and cool at night; young cane growing well.—McBryde Sugar Co.

Koloa—Warm days continue, but nights have been cool and showery; rainfall during the week, 55 inch.—P. McLane.

Lihue—The weather this week has been somewhat cooler, with a few good showers of rain; cane doing well.—F. Weber.

Kealia—Good growing weather, and young cane looking well; maturing crop of cane about to tassel.—W. Jarvis.

Kilauea—Warm weather continues, and conditions generally are favorable for the growth of cane; showers every day; on 15th there was a rainfall of 29 inch at plantation office and 4.57 inches at Pihia, three miles distant.—L. B. Boreiko.

Hanalei—Rice doing fairly well, but heavy rains during the past week have done some damage to ripening rice; pastures in fine condition; Princeville plantation planting new fields of Buffalo grass.—E. G. K. Deverill.

A. McC. ASHLEY, Section Director.

CONCERTED PLUNDERING

Willie Ayau told a plain story on the witness stand, before Judge De Bolt and the jury yesterday, about the systematic robbery practiced upon the Pacific Hardware Co., Ltd., by himself and others, over a year ago. The case on trial is a civil suit of the corporation named against the Chinese firm of Sing Chan Co. to recover the value of goods sold and delivered. As previously reported, a tender of about $500 in court was declined by plaintiff's attorney.

An indictment is on the calendar now for the second term against Ayau and Yim Chan for conspiracy in the first degree for the robbery in question. Therefore J. Lightfoot, attorney for defendants in the civil suit, requested the court to direct Ayau that he was not obliged to give evidence tending to criminate himself. Judge De Bolt granted the request.

Nevertheless Ayau chose to tell what appeared to be a straight story without regard to the consequences to himself in the criminal case hanging over his head. It was a story of most audacious dishonesty on his own part as a trusted clerk of the Pacific Hardware Co., linked with boldest rascality on the part of two others in the store of Sing Chan Co., one succeeding the other, in tempting Ayau to rob his employer.

Ayau testified that he was met by Wong Yune, who offered to give him 40 per cent, while turning 10 per cent. into the store of Sing Chan Co., of the value of such goods as might be delivered to the latter firm without being charged against it on the books of the Pacific Hardware Co. Ayau, after explaining the sales methods of the Pacific Hardware Co. to his tempter, agreed with Wong Yune to see if the scheme could not be worked.

The scheme Ayau devised was in brief that, after an order from Sing Chan Co. was filled, he was to stamp the bill as paid with the Pacific Hardware Co.'s stamp for that purpose and then abstract the sale tags corresponding with the items from the cashier's desk and deliver them to Wong Yune. The latter part of the operation was insisted on by Wong Yune at the outset.

In the first bill of goods thus manipulated the amount was $40 or $50, and Ayau was paid $15.50 on delivery of the tags. The next bill was a matter of $50 or $60, on which Ayau was paid $19.40. Each time the transaction was completed in Sing Chan Co.'s store.

When Wong Yune was about to leave for China he told Ayau that Yim Chan would take his place in carrying on the scheme of working the Pacific Hardware Co. Yim Chan came into the store about a week after Wong Yune left and bought some goods.

"He told me he was in the same place," the witness said. "I told him I could not do it so quick."

Yet he did the trick again within two days, when Yim Chan bought a bill of between $75 and $80, on which Ayau got $30.

Sometimes Yim Chan came to buy three times a week, but increased the frequency of his visits to five times a week. He would buy from different salesmen. All of the purchases were not subjected to the scheme.

"The tags Yim Chan wanted me to take out he told me. Some he said were to be charged on the books," the witness testified.

Sometimes Sing Chan Co.'s wagon took the goods away. Yim Chan always paid Ayau his percentage on delivery of the goods and the vouchers.

"He never paid me any money," Ayau testified, "except when I gave him a receipted bill and tag."

A. G. M. Robertson, attorney for plaintiff, asked:

"What was the value of the tags—all that were taken for goods which were not entered on the books?"

"Between $2500 and $3000," Willie Ayau answered.

The Federal trial jurors were selected yesterday morning and excused until Monday next.
